Dublin (Ireland). The writer cannot meet the addressee in Bristol, because his son Richard is soon to leave for California. Hopes, however, to see the addressee in Liverpool before she sails. The writer, who sorely misses his wife, writes about her with praise and admiration. The writer expresses his own and Professor Cairnes's approbation of Lincoln's letter. The writer, referring to Sumner's fear of English intervention, says that he himself never feared active intervention except at the time of the Trent affair; believes that rulers and people sincerely desire to keep out of war. However, 999/1000 of the people are surprised by the acts of the Democratic party, the Irish mob in New York, etc. Hereford Hope and others like him hate republics. Tells how H.W. Beecher's and William Henry Channing's lectures were received. The writer's daughter Deborah altered the "what barbarous original" of the lines to the "John Brown March."

No.68

«Boston» Thanks O. J. and Mrs. Sarah J. Savin for inviting him and his wife to stay with them, but they plan to visit their niece, Anne Percy. W.L.G. discusses insertion of a notice of the Third Decade meeting in the New York Tribune. Does not think that H. W. Beecher has treated the American Anti-Slavery Society "fairly and magnanimously." Notes, that in his English speeches, he has ignored "the name and services of George Thompson in our behalf." "P.S. As the Hutchinsons cannot be with us, we shall probably have to give up the idea of music at our meetings." Will ask A. L. Cox for the loan of the parchment Declaration of Sentiments.

To Deborah Weston

No. 5

•Camp near Brandy Station, Va.. The writer is very thankful for the addressee's letter and for the box that Mrs. Weston is sending: "it will be quite different from oping a hard tack Box." The writer cannot send the Yarmouth Herald to Mary(?) as he reads it so much that there is nothing left of it. Comments with sympathy on the deaths of Mr. Willis and Miss Pierce, and mentions the marriage of Captain Pierce. The writer has not had letter from his wife since Christmas Day. The Battery is having a fine winter at camp. "... it was so warm today like in summer." They are having a nice time in the winter quarters. "... the Boys are all well and in good spirits-eager for the spring campaign. They have four guns now, "but I hope while Capt. John Bigelow is in Boston, we may get some Recruits to fill the Battery up again." Many horses have died, but they have just received twenty new ones today. "I rode this a new Horse-he is quite spunky I have a good deal to worke about them-on account Sergt Baker being sickly-I take it for a pleasure for I like horses." They had a mounted inspection for Captain Hart, whose battery was with them at Gettysburg. "He did not inspect us very sharp he knows we are all Great fighting Heroes-who he loves for he is one himself ..."

The writer has been eighteen months in the U. S. service.

«Camp near Brandy Station, Va.» The writer, on a comfortable Sunday afternoon, imagines himself back at the addressee's home. "... the Dream «was» as if I was in your kitchen-hear-you come downstairs singing ..." Thanks the addressee for the contents of a box, especially the mince pies, which taste "still more sweeter while they were made by your own hands." But the writer still needs a towel, as they cannot get towels in the army. The soldiers all enjoy health and comfort. They are expecting recruits from Boston. Relates an adventure crossing the Rappahannock on horseback. "We had no need to cross the River-We done it for fun ..." Tells of a corps on reconnaissance to find out Lee had his troops posted "so

«Boston. The writer and Aunt Mary «Gray Chapman, are looking forward to seeing the addressees and their children. W. Phillips is lecturing in New York tonight against Pres. Lincoln. G. Thompson is lecturing on England and the Rebellion. The writer is not troubled by the difference between the views of Garrison and Phillips. Garrison put Thompson in communication with Governor Andrew, who took him to the Union Club and is going to preside at the reception given him. John Forbes is busy with it. The writer has "left no stone unturned to prevent playing into the hands of the South." Fortunately "the ruling class in England is not the governing class-nor are Weymouth (Mass.). The writer wrote a long letter to the addressee which she never received, as her sister Anne (Chapman) did not choose to forward it because in it the writer mentioned Harriet Martineau, "who has insulted Lizzy so." From this starting-point the writer brings into relief the emotional and injudicious intolerance of differences which now prevails. "Why hate, or be sorry, that another cannot think as we do?" The writer favors Lincoln "because, to a progressive domestic policy, he adds a friendly foreign one." Objects to "bullying" the government, as Wendell (Phillips) advises. The writer cannot counsel "violence or passion interference or obtrusion." Nor would she write to her  after learning "that you did not want to hear from as I am - & not made up into «Boston: Will not accompany G. Thompson to Washington, but hopes that O. J. will do so. G. Thompson will pay part of his (O. J.'s) expenses. Discusses the Washington invitation. Says the weather was bad during the reception for G. T. at H. W. Beecher's church. "Mr. Thompson is not always equally eloquent, and does not sustain so even a flight as Mr. Phillips ..." Refers to G. T.'s habit of taking snuff. "My dear wife is gaining steadily, little by little, every week." Favors Pres. Lincoln in the coming election. A.L.s. 4 p. 8 x 5 in.

c(New York). Draft of a letter, with deletions and corrections. Refers to a leading article in the newspaper, headed Economy in Dress & Living. Points out certain irrelevances.

"Pray do not let us become so bewildered as to call either our virtues or good fortune a sin. It is because we are a republican people that every woman above the condition of abject poverty has a silk gown ..." The only issue is the saving of money. "The Ladies of Boston have through a Committee consulted their own Members of Congress who have advised a non-importation policy." Doubts the utility of discussing the use of wine and cigars and ladies who probably not give up tea and coffee. Objects to the doctrine of the "inordinate luxury" of the South. In spite of misplaced emphasis, the pledge (of the Economical League?) "seems most judiciously drawn up. If no

Philadelphia. "Mr. Phillips amazes me with his recklessness of assertion." Comments on the Cleveland Convention, which has for its object the defeat of Lincoln and the election of J. C. Fremont. Mentions P. Pillsbury, S. S. Foster and James Redpath with sarcastic allusions to French revolutionists. If the "American Anti-Slavery Society" continues in active existence, it will be a political club, not a great moral association. Mr. Phillips settled its character when he insisted upon a vote on his ultr-anti-Lincoln resolution." The writer wishes to know Mrs. M. W. Chapman's stand on the "Fremont question."

«Boston» The Executive Committee of the American Anti-Slavery Society met to consider W. Phillips's charges that the National Anti-Slavery Standard had become "a partisan Lincoln sheet ..." and that O. J. was opposed to J. C. Fremont and the Cleveland Convention. The Committee decided that great care must be exercised to avoid seeming to favor Lincoln's election.

12 July	To Richard Davis Webb	Vol.10 No.8

Leicester, Mass.. The writer discusses John A. Collins. Defends the policy of the U.S. in regard to the enlistment of British subjects in its armies and the importation of foreign labor by private industry. Attacks the Marquis of Clanricarde. Says that the yacht Deerhound which rescued the survivors of the Alabama was near the scene of the action by prearrangement. Discusses the dissension among the Abolitionists over the candidacies of President Lincoln and John C. Fremont. The writer lists what Lincoln has done for the slaves. Says his son Edward is home again recovering from malaria.

.In the field near Petersburg, Va.. The hair enclosed in the addressee's letter is very light. "Annas German flaxen-hair I call it." Discusses the advisability of sending little Anna to Yarmouth with Leticia; thinks she may be useful at home. "Anna can walk and when you have the Boys on your lap ... you can say-Anna go and get me this or that ..." Hopes since the addressee wants to move, that she will find a suitable place. Suggests finding a house "with another good friendly family together." Mentions the likelihood of his coming home on furlough this winter "to see you and my children." The writer was ordered to take charge of the 3rd gun of his Battery at Fort Warren south of Petersburg. So he left "his nice Summer Residence" and went under a heavy fire

„Near Murfreesboro: The writer has only lately looked upon Slavery as a crime, and wonders how he lived so long so morally obtuse. The writer's wife has always been an Abolitionist, but he did not know it until within the last three years. Met a man who three years before owned 60 slaves, but always considered slave-holding wrong. Considering the continued exploitation of the negro, the writer asks what his status shall be. "A large rebel invasion threatening Gen. Sherman's rear & communications" has caused alarm for ten days, but Gen. N. B. To Epes Sargent 1813-1880

[London] Encloses letter he hopes will be printed to counteract Mr. Garrison's misapprehensions of his meaning. Believes Garrison and Conway both to be charged with feeling the negro question so deeply as to exclude feelings of patriotism. Discusses probability of a war to be forced on America by Louis Napoleon. Deplores position of negro troops and the Polish situation.

Leicester, Mass.. The writer mentions meeting H. B. Hammond, a friend of Mr. Webb. Discusses the sale of Mr. Webb's Life of John Brown. Complains that certain European newspapers are constantly belittling Union military successes. Also that Moncure D. Conway has changed Prof. F. W. Newman's opinions on the War by a one-sided presentation of the facts. The writer defends the Lincoln administration. Attacks the Northern sympathizers with the Confederacy. Holds that the Secessionists repudiated the Constitution. Explains the need for strong popular support of an anti-Slavery measure in the U.S. Discusses Goldwin Smith's lecture on the affairs of the Garrison family, the nomination of Gen. McClellan and Gen. Fremont's political misfortunes.

Boston. Discusses the plan to merge the Liberator and the National Anti-Slavery Standard. "The actual number of paying subscribers to both papers is under four thousand." Thinks that if G. B. McClellan had been elected, the Liberator and the Standard would have had to merge and continue in operation, but now W.L.G. expects Congress to adopt the Anti-Slavery amendments to the Constitution, thereby removing the need for continued activity by the American Anti-Slavery Society. Does not consider that the Liberator's effectiveness ever depended solely on his writings. Regrets that the merger proposal was submitted to the Pennsylvania Anti-Slavery Society.

«Florence, (Italy). The writer says he would have thanked Miss Field sooner for all her kindnesses, but he has been very busy trying to get his History of Florence ready for publication. Says that Isa Blagden wrote all she knew about W. S. Landor's death to Miss Field. Tells about Landor's will. Mentions a libel suit lost by Landor. Says Mrs. Browning's monument has not yet been erected. Some changes were made in the design of the monument. Hopes Miss Field can get a position as a newspaper correspondent in Italy. Comments on the progress of the Union armies in the Civil War and Secretary Seward's reply to Lord Wharncliffe. Says he is very fortunate in the "moment at which his History of Florence will come out ...". Says there have been great changes in Florence. Praises the "dramatic drawing-room" of Mrs. Ritchie. Asks how he can

Boston. The writer discusses his correspondence. Says he has been disappointed in the anti-Slavery sentiment in England. Could not understand the English inability to grasp the significance of the Abolitionist doctrines. Says he has been somewhat impatient with his country's slow trend toward the abolition of Slavery. Thanks his English friends for a generous donation. Sends a book by Sen. Henry Wilson. Mentions differences of opinion among the members of the American Anti-Slavery Society. Describes Wendell Phillips' part in this dissension. Tells why he favored Lincoln. Would like to know the English pro-Slavery reaction to Sherman's march through Georgia. «Dublin (Ireland). The writer holds his American friends in continual remembrance. Has been "amazed by the energy, resources & perseverance exhibited by the Southerners in their effort to obtain an unfettered victory for their evil 'institution'." The writer enumerates various reasons for British lack of sympathy with the North, and yet the "powerful portion of people which ranks between the peasantry & the wealthy gentry & manufacturers has sufficed to prevent any serious disposition to take an active part in the American quarrel." Even at the time of the Trent affair the writer did not fear government intervention. Although there have been blockades and war ships have been supplied, the writer thinks that such acts are now disapproved. "I am even more of a republican than ever."

The writer has less and less hope for the poor of Europe so long as they remain the "playthings of monarchical & aristocratic institutions." At the public meetings concerned with the American question that the writer attended the great majority was unmistakably on the Northern side. In the case of the Bristol mob that broke up a Northern meeting, the writer believes that the rioters were paid. The writer has sold his house in the country and is living in the pleasantest suburb of Dublin.

(New York). The writer would like to have "the will" returned. "I can hardly realise the meanness of the man. What could he have been thinking about." The writer has been miserable for three days with pain and various troubles. "I think one year more will bring me to the end of my string." The house seems deserted except for the immediate family. Comments on Seward's going to Fort Munroe to meet the Rebel Commanders. "I hope he won't commit any darned folly..." Remarks on the strangeness of Elisabeth (Bates) Vandeweyer's never having written a line to the writer.

“Durdham Down, Bristol (England).” “I live with you far more than in my own town or country.” The writer rejoiced in the passing of the abolition amendment in the House of Representatives. Refers with regret to the dissentients like W. Phillips, S.S. Foster, and P. Pillsbury. Wonders why they should be “raking up the past & distrusting the future instead of drawing forth hope out of the present.” The writer was aggravated by Mrs. (Abby Kelley) Foster's suggestion at the Mass. annual meeting “to release Mrs. Chapman and Miss Weston.” The writer's wish to visit America is re-doubled, but her health “collapses under conditions of travelling.” Describes her present life. When the writer was in Dublin she was touched by Mr. (Richard D.) Webb's “tender consideration for his daughters & guests.”

To "My dear Friend" Caroline Weston?

•Dublin(Ireland). The writer's interest in the Anti-Slavery cause and in America has never abated. The bulk of the English working classes and the most eminent Englishmen have been "all along on your side." Cobden, "the most eminent man in the nation, was always a staunch friend of the North." Names also Bright, Tennyson, Mill, Hughes, and Professor Newman. Cairnes came to the writer's office in a state of exaltation about the fall of Richmond. The writer inquires about the addressee's family and about Edmund Quincy, who has dropped the writer's acquaintance. The writer sympathizes with W.Phillips in his views on Louisiana, but thinks it unwise of him to be so ready to quarrel with England.

«Dublin (Ireland). Laments the death of Lincoln - "next to Washington the greatest of the American presidents and in integrity & absence of self-seeking inferior to none." The writer characterizes President Johnson as "an intemperate man, a man of ability, but uncultivated & of a far less gentle character than Lincoln." The writer sends 100(copies?) of Whittier's "beautiful poem". The writer went to the north of Ireland to attend the funeral of Mrs.White, mother-in-law of his brother James Webb. Deborah and Anne, the writer's daughters, have more variety in their lives since they moved near town, but in spring the writer misses "the lovely green fields".
